<td>ED-D 417 (A01) Skills for Effective Interpersonal Communication</td>
<td>This course involves the study of helping relationships in the classroom, counselling, family life, and mental health, as well as theories of personal effectiveness; and analysis and practice of effective relating skills. The course is conducted as a participative seminar and with a focus practical skill building. The main focus in the course is on understanding, learning, practicing, and demonstrating the basic skills that underlie helping relationships. This course is not merely about learning the concepts at an intellectual level, but taking that understanding and applying it in practical, experiential settings. Students will be participating in a class which involves a great deal of experiential learning exercises, as well as lectures, and class discussions. Some personal disclosure will be required as part of this course.</td>
