Principle for Responsible Management Education #1: Students generate sustainable value

And wow, do Gustavson students ever do that!

Check out a couple of our latest great stories:

Gustavson helps Norway
Four Gill Grad School MBA students showed the managers of Norway’s Government Pension Fund Global how to divest some of its USD940 billion and generate 219 percent returns. Yes, seriously.
Mukesh Dhatwalia, Bhupinder Dulku, Dorothy Pan, and Laurent Sevigny, coached by professor Matt Murphy, earned first place in the Corporate Knights-Schulich Business for a Better World case competition in Davos, Switzerland on January 22, 2016.
The win over some of the other best business schools in the world has been wildly celebrated by their friends and profs at Gustavson, as well as Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, who was in Davos at the same time for the World Economic Forum.

On December 11, 2015, three Gustavson undergrads did what had previously been thought impossible.

On a Friday afternoon, right after a final exam, Chase Cedar (R), Eve Olynyk, and Nick Pineau got dozens of students together to hear from seven of their professors. These were the same profs they’d been listening to all fall, and everyone was tired, so what was the draw?

Find out on Gustavson’s blog how these students are engaging in their own education and getting ready to lead us all into the future.

Join the Communiqué mailing list. Leave the mailing list. Share a good idea.