BANKING

If you have a study permit, we recommend opening an account at a financial institution in Canada. The major banks in Victoria are listed here. Research your options before making a decision!

Bank of Montreal (BMO) – www.bmo.com

Bank of Nova Scotia (Scotiabank) – www.scotiabank.ca

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce (CIBC) – www.cibc.com

Canadian Western Bank (CWB) – www.cwbank.com

Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation (HSBC) – www.hsbc.ca

TD Canada Trust – www.tdcanadatrust.com

There are no bank branches on campus, but TD Canada Trust and RBC have automated banking machines (ABMs) on campus. If you use an ABM that is not owned by your financial institution, you will probably be charged a service fee.

Some things to consider when choosing a financial institution and type of account:

- Is there a branch located near UVic or near where you live?
- What are the days and hours of operation for that branch?
- Do they have many ABMs located in Victoria?
- Do they offer online, mobile and telephone banking?
- When and how is customer service available?
- Are they a Sign-In Partner on IRCC’s online system?
- Do they offer account options that meet your needs?
- What fees are associated with each account option?
- Is there a minimum monthly balance for the fees to be waived?
- Is there a student account option with no fees?
- What other charges are associated with each account option?
- What interest rates are associated with each account option?
- What restrictions, if any, are associated with each account option?
- What credit card and loan options are available for international students?
- What investment options are available for international students?
Opening an account:

You will need to provide the financial institution with a local address, your study permit and two pieces of photo identification, such as your UVic ONECard and your passport. You will also need some money to deposit into your account.

You will receive a debit card. The debit card will be protected with a personal identification number (PIN). You can use your debit card to deposit and withdraw money at automated banking machines (ABMs). You can also use your debit card to purchase items, and the charges will be deducted from your account immediately.

If you have a study permit, and a financial institution is not willing to open an account for you, consider banking with a different financial institution. If you wish to make a complaint, ask for instructions. By law, all financial institutions must have a process for dealing with complaints. Contact the Financial Consumer Agency of Canada (FCAC) toll-free at 1-866-461-3222 for more information.

Applying for a credit card:

Getting a credit card can be difficult for international students. Your financial institution will probably set a very low spending limit for at least six months. You may also be required to keep a minimum balance in an account that is tied to the credit card.

A credit card can be used to purchase items, and the charges will accumulate on your account until you pay them off. The minimum monthly payment is usually lower than total charges. However, charges carried forward accumulate interest, so the best practice is to pay off total charges every month. Payments and charges carried forward affect your credit score.

A credit score, also called a credit rating, shows your history of borrowing money and paying it back. A high credit score means you make payments regularly and are responsible with credit. Having a high credit score is very important in Canada. It allows you to raise the limit of your credit card and to borrow money in the future. Always make payments on time and pay off debt as soon as possible to maintain a high credit score.

If you are not eligible for a credit card, MasterCard and Visa offer prepaid cards that are reloadable and can be used wherever MasterCard or Visa is accepted. Visit www.mastercard.ca or www.visa.ca or ask your financial institution for more information about prepaid cards.

If you have questions:

Visit your financial institution in person and ask to speak with someone who can help you find the right service package for your needs.
