Avoid future loan headaches

Contact the Student Awards & Financial Aid office to discuss your plans before dropping or changing any summer courses!

Things to consider before withdrawing from full-time studies:

1. Six months after withdrawing from full-time studies, the student becomes responsible for starting to repay outstanding loans and accrued interest.
2. Any loan or grant disbursements awarded for the current session are forfeited. In particular, the University will not confirm enrolment for individuals who are not full-time students.
3. If student loans and grants have already been released for the current term and a student subsequently withdraws, the provincial student loan authority may require that a portion be repaid.

If you do not qualify as a full-time student, you may be able to apply for PART-TIME LOAN OR GRANT FUNDING
