Geography and the Working World: How Geography comes to life during co-op experiences

Geography Co-op Students
Faculty of Social Sciences,
University of Victoria

Several Geography Co-op students will share their insights on how their co-op experiences benefited their studies and professional development, as well as how their geography studies benefited their organizations. Through these presentations, you can learn about how geography comes to life in work settings such as:

- government auditing
- reforestation and tree planting
- international institutes
- national parks
- low-income housing
- anti-bullying non-profit organization
- museum
