Limited-Term Assistant Teaching Professor Positions

The Department of Computer Science at the University of Victoria invites applications for two limited-term Assistant Teaching Professor positions starting May 1, 2019. The highly qualified individual employed will be responsible for teaching six courses with flexible assignment (e.g., three courses in the fall term, two courses in the spring term and one course in the summer term) for a 12-month full-time appointment. Part-time appointments with flexible start dates may also be considered.

Possible teaching assignments include courses from: 1st-year courses, including first and second term programming courses and a variety of computer science service courses, as well as select courses from other years, including 2nd year core courses, 3rd year software engineering courses and a 3rd year graphics course. Successful applicants will be assigned selected administrative duties.

Computer Science course descriptions can be found at: http://www.csc.uvic.ca/Program_Information/Undergraduate_Courses/

Qualifications: Candidates must be experienced in teaching at the postsecondary level and must hold a PhD or Masters in Computer Science or a closely related field. A PhD is preferred.

Salary will be commensurate with qualifications and experience. Review of applications will begin Thursday, March 7, 2019 and continue until positions are filled. Applicants are asked to submit their application—including a CV, a Teaching Statement, and two reference letters—by email to atpsearch@csc.uvic.ca.

The University of Victoria is an equity employer and encourages applications from women, persons with disabilities, visible minorities, Aboriginal People, people of all sexual orientations and genders, and others who may contribute to the further diversification of the university. All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, in accordance with Canadian Immigration requirements, Canadians and permanent residents will be given priority.
