Goldcorp Inc. continues support for CSSI
Preparing the next generation of responsible leaders in business and society is a key goal of the Gustavson School of Business, and CSSI’s role is to support and catalyze initiatives to reach that goal. Recently, Goldcorp Inc. has again stepped forward with financial support for the centre. There’s more on the story on Gustavson’s and CSSI’s websites and in the Times Colonist article of Nov 18, 2017. As with CSSI’s previous agreements with Goldcorp Inc., the generous funding is independent of the centre’s activities and research.

Two films
1. The Road Forward @Cinecenta Dec 11, 12 An embarrassment of riches regarding the political, cultural, and day-to-day life of Canada’s First Nations people, according to the Georgia Straight.
2. Human Flow @Cinecenta Dec 13, 14 A bracing, often strangely beautiful movie by the artist Ai Weiwei that charts the global refugee and migrant crisis.

UN Migration Agency, RBA Team Up to Target Forced Labor, Exploitation
“The exploitation of migrant workers often begins at the recruitment stage...,” said Marina Manke, Head of the Labor Mobility and Human Development Division at the UN agency International Organization for Migration. Also, global risk consultancy Verisk Maplecroft released its second annual Modern Slavery Index, which revealed that modern slavery is on the rise as a result of the escalating refugee crisis in Europe. The story and more links on Sustainable Brands, Oct 27, 2017.

Webinar: Women and the Sustainable Development Goals
GlobeScan is hosting a webinar on December 12 @ 8 am PT on how business can invest in women to lead the way on the SDGs. By creating strategies and investing in women’s leadership on the SDGs, progress on all of the SDGs will move more quickly. Panelists: Gail Klintworth, Business & Sustainable Development Commission, and Katja Freiwald, Global Partnerships & Advocacy Director for Women & Livelihoods, Unilever.

Women’s Leadership
In advance of the webinar (or just on its own), you can review a discussion paper released by the Business & Sustainable Development Commission that highlights existing research about women’s leadership styles, mechanisms that help mobilise more women into leadership roles, and compelling case studies from around the world showcasing women who are already driving the sustainable development agenda.

Social innovation:
in your pocket and on the street
Privacy, fairness, trust...security, suspicion, or streamlining... Facial recognition will go mainstream in 2018, according to The Economist. The video’s here.

Proudly supported by Goldcorp Inc.