Educational resource library
The Saint Mary's University’s Sobey School of Business has launched the Sobey School PRME Library, a curated online collection of 500 (so far) educational resources related to ethics, sustainability, and social and environmental issues within and beyond business.
The collection has been sorted into categories such as Economics, Computing and Information Systems, Finance, Accounting, and Marketing, with each containing sections for Articles, Papers & Reports; Books; Case Studies; Pedagogical Research. There are also videos, simulations, teaching games and other resources.
The collection is available to the public, although some of the resources require subscriptions for access to full text.
There is information about the UN Global Compact, PRME, and each resource is mapped to the Sustainable Development Goals that it addresses.

EMERGE: Mindshifting Through Emergent Leadership
November 29 @ 3-4 pm EST = 6-7 pm PT
Free
If mindset is the most important place to leverage change in an institution, that that’s the place we want to intervene, but our own mindset is as important if we are to succeed. How does the EMERGE Leadership Model, a systems-based and strategic framework, prepare us be agents of change while mindful of our own need to learn and change? The author of EMERGE: A Strategic Leadership Model for the Sustainable Building Community describes the model and in particular how the mindset of others and ourselves are critical in achieving a truly sustainable future.

Dan Ariely in WSJ on regifting
Dec 23, 2016
Dear Dan,
Is regifting OK? Over the years, I’ve received plenty of gifts that I didn’t want, and I’m thinking about getting rid of them this holiday season. Can I tell the people that I’m regifting what I’m doing? —Beth
In general, I consider regifting a wonderful practice. So long as the present that you are regifting is something that you think the new owner will appreciate, you aren’t just giving them something that they will like; you are preventing waste and saving money.
As to whether you can tell your friends and family that you’ve regifted them a present, sadly, we still aren’t a sufficiently enlightened society. So for now, I would slap on fresh wrapping paper and keep the history of the gift a secret.

Tips for the vegan curious
Grist editor Eve Andrews went vegan for a month, picked up a few tips, and then went back to see how she felt about her favorite burger. Watch the video and find out!
For Gustavson folks, there’s a section of fantastic recipes on the Gustavson Connect site that we developed after our Earth Day Vegetarian Challenge earlier this year. (Other resources> Culture> Documents> Vegetarian Challenge 2017 recipes)
