

A Medical Ethics Mini-Series

Ethics from Early Life
To End-of-Life Care

Colin Macleod is Professor of Philosophy and Law at the University of Victoria. He is Chair of the Philosophy Department. His research focuses on issues in contemporary moral, political and legal theory with a special focus on the distributive justice and equality; children, families and justice; and democratic ethics. He is the author of Liberalism, Justice, and Markets (OUP 1998); co-editor with David Archard of The Moral and Political Status of Children (OUP 2002), and co-author with Ben Justice of Have a Little Faith: Religion, Democracy, and the American Public School (University of Chicago Press 2016).

