

University
of Victoria

Institute for Integrated Energy Systems webinar

How can we manage a just transition?

Policies and practices from across OECD countries

Dr. Tamara Krawchenko

Wed., January 13
1:00-2:00pm

How can we transition to more sustainable and ecological industries, support green jobs and develop resilient communities? In other words, how can we manage a just transition? This is a central governance challenge facing our polity at every scale. In this seminar, Dr. Krawchenko will present an analysis of national and regional policies for just transitions from across 26 OECD countries and share comparative policy lessons for Canada.

More information and meeting link:

<https://www.uvic.ca/research/centres/iesvic/news-events/index.php>

Dr. Tamara Krawchenko is an Assistant Professor in the School of Public Administration and member of the Institute for Integrated Energy Systems at the University of Victoria. She is an expert in comparative public policy and regional development and has she advised governments on a range of topics including rural policy (Poland), regional development (Greece, Kazakhstan, Sweden), the governance of land use (Czech Republic, France, the Netherlands, Poland) and Indigenous economic development (Canada and Sweden).

University
of Victoria

Institute for Integrated Energy Systems