The widely-held perspective is that Roman military bases, housed essentially segregated communities of male soldiers and their officers. This lecture discusses new analytical and theoretical approaches to the use of space within the 1st and 2nd centuries CE military sites.