Upholding a Respectful Environment at the Shifting Tides Conference

The Shifting Tides Conference is an academic meeting with a long tradition of providing an environment in which students can present their first papers in an atmosphere of mutual respect. We want to build on that legacy by ensuring that the Shifting Tides conference continues to provide a respectful environment in which the human dignity of each individual is valued, and the diverse perspectives, ideas and experiences of all participants are able to flourish. This kind of environment allows everyone to participate to the extent they wish.

All of us, both individually and collectively, take responsibility for maintaining a respectful environment at Shifting Tides. As participants, we commit to avoiding sexual, racial, and other forms of discrimination and harassment. Harassment can be a single incident or several incidents that continue over time, and comprise unwanted and unwelcome behaviour that may range from mildly unpleasant remarks to physical violence. Harassment includes behaviours that demean, humiliate or embarrass a person and inhibits their full participation at the conference and its associated events. They can include actions (e.g. touching, pushing), comments (e.g. jokes, name-calling, suggestive or inappropriate remarks), or displays (e.g. posters, cartoons).

Here are some suggestions to help us create a respectful environment:

- Recognize that everyone has a right to express their views and everyone has a right to feel safe at all times
- Know your own boundaries, and respect those and the boundaries of others
- In discussion assume positive intent and approach that person's response with curiosity (ie trying to understand where that person is coming from)
- Be aware that humour that can be hurtful to individuals or specific groups
- If you feel you need to address something someone said, try to call back them into the respectful environment, rather than calling them out for their behaviour

In the interest of creating a safer space and preventing sexualized violence, we are encouraging everyone to consider these guidelines regarding sexual consent:

- Consent must be mutual, verbal and enthusiastic
- It is the responsibility of the initiator to ensure the other person is consenting
- Consent cannot be predetermined and must be obtained at every stage
- Consent cannot be given when drunk or under the influence of any substance

To help ensure a respectful environment and full participation in the academic goals of the conference, we also strongly discourage people from drinking irresponsibly. Drinking to excess does not excuse bad behaviour.

If you see any behaviour that undermines the respectful environment that we want at Shifting Tides, please don't let it go. If you witness such behaviour, or if you yourself are subject to it, we encourage you to tell someone – either tell the person involved directly or, if you don't feel comfortable doing that, speak to one of the faculty representatives at the conference or afterwards at your institution. Conference participants who contravene these guidelines may be barred from future conferences. As a result, conference organizers would be obligated to report any complaint to the participant's home institution.

By submitting this registration form, you are agreeing that you have read and accept these conditions for participating in the Shifting Tides Conference.
