Course Description

This course will be conducted with a two-fold goal in mind.

On the one hand, it is meant to serve as an introduction to the sorts of concerns that arise amongst bioethicists when matters of death and dying are at issue. As such, our discussions of death and dying throughout the course will touch on deliberations over medical, moral and legal topics, including: the clinical definition of death; the rationality of suicide; the nature of the relationship between care-givers and the dying; the role that surrogate decision makers or proxies play at the end of life; passive and active euthanasia; physician-assisted suicide; and, the legitimacy of requests made by the dying to have treatment withheld or withdrawn

On the other hand, this course on death and dying affords us the opportunity to explore some of the broader and deeper questions about death and dying that have exercised philosophers from Plato to the present.

All humans are mortal. We are humans, and therefore we are going to die.

This simple syllogism carries with it an enormous weight. It states a fact. A fact about us, about all of us, and it is an unsettling and indeed unpleasant fact to grapple with. It is precisely this fact about death, however, which has acted as a powerful motive force, prompting deep philosophical reflection about the value and meaning of life and how best to live that life. It is in taking up these reflections that we will be most engaged throughout the course. As such, much of our discussion will focus on how we are to respond to the fact that we are dying. We will take up the question of whether or not death is an evil, and whether or not it is to be feared. We will touch on the question of whether the fact of death robs life of meaning, or, on the contrary, it is that which provides life with meaning. We will examine the nature of suicide, and look to some classical views on whether or not it is ever permissible to kill oneself or, perhaps, whether it is sometimes laudable to do so. Lastly, we will take up the related question of who decides when and how we are to die. Is our own death a matter for us to decide, and if so, are we entitled to ask, or even, demand, that others not only respect that right, but assist us in exercising it?

N	Grade withheld	Did not write examination or complete course requirements by the end of term or session.

UNIVERSITY & COURSE POLICIES

Statement on Academic Integrity:

‘Academic integrity requires commitment to the values of honesty, trust, fairness, respect, and responsibility. It is expected that students, faculty members and staff at the University of Victoria, as members of an intellectual community, will adhere to these ethical values in all activities related to learning, teaching, research and service. Any action that contravenes this standard, including misrepresentation, falsification or deception, undermines the intention and worth of scholarly work and violates the fundamental academic rights of members of our community.’

For the full statement of the University’s Policy on Academic Integrity, including definitions of the violations of the policy, the procedures for dealing with such violations and the possible penalties that might be administered, please consult the Undergraduate Programs Calendar.

Diversity Statement:

UVic is committed to equity, diversity, social justice and fostering a welcoming and diverse learning, teaching and working environment. These are essential elements in achieving excellence in research and education. As members of a diverse and dynamic learning community, we each have a role to play in creating safe, supportive, inclusive and healthy learning environments that foster mutual respect and civility, and that recognize that people are our primary strength.

Accessibility Statement:

Students with diverse learning styles and needs are welcome in this course. In particular, if you have a disability/health consideration that may require accommodations, please feel free to approach me and/or the Resource Centre for Accessible Learning (CAL) as soon as possible. The CAL staff are available by appointment to assess specific needs, provide referrals and arrange appropriate accommodations <https://www.uvic.ca/services/cal/>. The sooner you let us know your needs the quicker we can assist you in achieving your learning goals in this course.

Policy on Names:

Though there is no official policy on the use of names and pronouns that are appropriate to individual students’ identities, my own personal policy is that of respecting the student’s own wishes for how he/she/they would like to be addressed. Please feel comfortable in coming to talk to me about which names and pronouns are appropriate to you.

Territorial Acknowledgment:

We acknowledge with respect the Lkwungen-speaking peoples on whose traditional territory the university stands and the Songhees, Esquimalt and WSÁNEĆ peoples whose historical relationships with the land continue to this day.

Trigger Warning:

This course will involve frank discussions of death and dying, including, our own inevitable dying and death as well as the dying and death of others. Should it be the case that your circumstances are such so as to make these conversations difficult, please feel free to speak to me.
