This course will combine synchronous and asynchronous elements. The lecture materials will be delivered asynchronously – posted at the start of a given week on the course web site, along with any other teaching materials. The scheduled Thursday course slot will be used for on-line discussion sessions, hosted by the instructor. (This is the synchronous element of the course.) Students will be divided into groups; those groups will rotate through the Thursday slot. Depending on the enrollment numbers, students can expect to be required to ‘attend’ approximately one third of these sessions. Details and final plan will be announced near the start of term.

Course Description
Ludwig Wittgenstein (1889-1951) is a central figure in 20th Century philosophy. In his early work (the Tractatus Logico-Philosophicus, 1922), he employed a stark, ‘logical’ approach and offered a highly systematic conception of thought, language, world, and the relation among them, as well as of philosophy itself. In his later work (including the Philosophical Investigations, 1953), he employed a very different method, repudiated many of the ideas he had formerly promoted, and offered very different ways of approaching these same subjects. This class will examine Wittgenstein’s work, both early and late. The goal is to give students an appreciation of the views and historical importance of this pivotal, and controversial, figure.

Texts [Available through the UVic Bookstore.]

Note: Because lectures, notes, and discussion will refer to specific places in the textbooks, it is important that students use the above editions of Wittgenstein’s works, if at all possible!

Evaluation
Students’ grades will be based on:
   a) Several short assignments. Students must write 5 of these, but can do up to 7. (The top 5 will be counted.) Topic questions will be distributed at start of a given week; students will have until the end of the week to complete them. (30%)
b) Paper. 8-10 pages long. Some topics will be suggested. Students may write on a topic of their own design, but only if they obtain the instructor’s permission in advance. (30%)

c) A cumulative, open-book final exam. (30%)

d) Participation in Thursday discussion sessions. The emphasis here is on attending (virtually) the minimum number of such sessions. Details to be announced as the term approaches. (10%)

Expectations

Students are expected to do the readings for a given week ahead of time, to watch./read the posted lecture materials as they are made available, and to be prepared to talk and ask questions about the course material (either directly, or in the scheduled discussion sessions).

Three quick tips for doing well in the course

1. Keep pace with the class materials. Watch/read the posted lecture materials as they are made available.

2. Do the readings ahead of time, and read ‘actively’ – pay attention to what you’re reading, ask yourself what point(s) the author(s) is trying to make, why this matters, what questions you’d like to ask the author, and so on.

3. If you’re having difficulty with any of the course material (readings or lecture content), speak to the instructor – take advantage of office hours (TBA) and discussion sessions.

Beyond the student’s having adequately addressed the topic question(s) on which he/she writes, evaluation of the short assignments and term paper will be based on: evidence of comprehension of the materials and issues addressed; evidence of original and critical thought with regard to that material; the extent to which the student stakes out a position and provides good reasons and arguments for it; the extent to which the student communicates his/her ideas clearly (using complete and grammatical sentences, correct terms, a clear essay structure, and so on). For the short assignments and term paper, the use of outside materials (i.e., any readings not assigned for the course) is permitted only if you have received the instructor’s permission ahead of time. Any materials used for the short essays (i.e., any course readings) must be properly cited in the standard way.

The standard University grading scheme will be used. Here is an excerpt from it (the full version is here: https://www.uvic.ca/calendar/undergrad/index.php#policy/S1AAGoGuV?bc=true&bcCurrent=14%20- %20Grading&bcGroup=Undergraduate%20Academic%20Regulations&bcItemType=policies.)
