ABOUT THIS COURSE:

In this course we shall examine some of the main works of Aristotle, whose writings are among the most profound and influential in the history of human thought. We shall focus mainly on the following writings, in the following order: Categories, Physics, Metaphysics, De Anima, and Nicomachean Ethics. Although we will be looking at these works in the order listed here, because Aristotle is a systematic philosopher whose works interconnect to a significant degree, at the outset of this course I will occasionally be referring ahead to the later works on this list. Therefore, I strongly advise you to start reading these works straight away and as quickly as possible, in order to gain an early appreciation of the systematic nature of Aristotle's thinking.

TEXT AND COURSE MATERIAL:

Aristotle: Selections, trans. Terence Irwin & Gail Fine, Indianapolis: Hackett Publishing Co. 1995 (paper ISBN-13: 978-0-915145-67-6). Depending on the way the class discussion evolves, from time to time I may introduce supplementary material.

This course is highly text-focused, which means that both in instruction and in evaluation (testing) emphasis is put on your ability to understand the assigned readings and class discussions of them. In this course we will not be relying on secondary literature or commentary, though of course you are always welcome to supplement your reading and class lectures/discussions with secondary material.

Because there is such a focus on the text, students are strongly encouraged to make sure they use the specifically assigned textbook for this course. The philosopher studied in this course originally wrote in a language other than English, so the readings in this course are all translations. Because translations can sometimes differ greatly, it will be of great benefit to you if you use the assigned translation (textbook), on which both class discussion and essay questions/topics will be based. Using the assigned textbook will allow you to work from the same page (literally and figuratively) as everyone else in the class.

NOTE: As noted, the text used in this course is a translation of Aristotle's writings. Because many students initially find reading Aristotle quite difficult, whether in the original Greek (for students who know Greek) or in translation, they sometimes find it helpful to consult different translations. UVic's library has an electronic version of a different translation from the one used in this course. It is titled The Complete Works of Aristotle (2 volumes), and all of the works we will be studying in this course can be found either in Volume I or Volume II. Here is the link:

MARKING SCHEME:

(a) in-class test (25%); (b) take-home essay (35%); (c) final exam (40%).

All grading in this course will done by the course instructor (not by teaching assistant).

Letter grades correspond to the following marks: A+ = 90 - 100, A = 85 - 89, A- = 80 - 84, B+ = 77 - 79, B = 73 - 76, B- = 70 - 72, C+ = 65 - 69, C = 60 - 64, D = 50 - 59, F = 0 - 49.

MAIN EVALUATION CRITERIA:

The criteria I use to evaluate essays are, I believe, criteria which common sense would suggest in the assessment of philosophical writing. Primarily my concern is with content or substance, i.e., the course material; and in this respect the guiding question is the extent to which a student has understood the material. Of course, this does not mean that form or style count for nothing (and indeed it may not ultimately be possible to divorce form from content).

In indicating the evaluation criteria for this course, I emphasize that philosophy is an arts or humanities subject, which means that assessing the merits of philosophical writing ultimately requires qualitative evaluation or judgment on my part. Therefore, I do not assign precise numerical values to the following assessment criteria; nor is there a mathematical formula I can employ to judge the quality of your work. However, as a rough guide I employ a list of relative priorities, presented here in ascending order of importance:

- spelling/grammar
- organization & clarity of expression
- accuracy of exposition
- use of examples reflecting understanding of the subject
- breadth of analysis, i.e., number of points covered
- depth of analysis, i.e., how far into the issue analysis is pushed
- resourcefulness, originality and imagination

- tightness, rigor or logical coherence of analysis
- overall quality of philosophical insight and expression

I emphasize that, with the exception of the last criterion—that of overall quality of philosophical insight and expression—in practice the ranking of these criteria is not absolute. Thus, sometimes less important criteria will be given more weight than more important ones. For instance, a student’s use and analysis of examples might be so good that I am led to conclude that that student has an excellent understanding of the subject. In such a case the value I attach to the use of examples might increase significantly, and I might lay less emphasis on the fact that the student has failed (for instance) to cover as many points as other students.

CLASS ATTENDANCE, IN-CLASS DISCUSSION AND PARTICIPATION:

In this course you can assume that all essay topics are intended to test you on the material covered in class. You are of course permitted and encouraged to supplement class lectures and discussion of the subject with outside material, but the minimum expectation is that you deal with the material covered in class, and that you address the points raised there about that material. This does not mean that for essays you are expected merely to repeat the in-class proceedings. Rather, it means that you are expected to take explicit account of the texts and passages covered in class and to do justice to the in-class discussions of them. Needless to say, the best way to ensure that you take account of the texts and passages covered in class, is to attend class.

I cannot stress enough how important attendance is for writing your assignments (essays/in-class tests). The questions asked in these assignments are based solely on class lectures and discussions. The assignments for this course constitute part of a continuous whole with the lectures and in-class discussions. They do not float free of the work done in class, but are deliberately constructed to incorporate what goes on there. Assignments that fail to incorporate important points arising out of class discussion will be penalized accordingly. At the same time, essays can also provide you with room to explore topics more deeply than they have been treated in class, and good essays do precisely that. Overall, then, “B+” and “A-” papers take account of and rise to the level of the class discussion; “A” and “A+” papers take that discussion to a higher/deeper level.

In general my classes tend to involve lots of discussion. I encourage and greatly value your in-class contributions, and I can assure you that other students do too. It is a frequently unacknowledged fact of the classroom that if you have a question or comment, it’s highly likely that others have the same one too. So, go ahead and ask your question, or make your comment: it helps me, you, and your classmates. If, however, you are more reserved but still have comments or questions, please come see me during office hours.

If you happen to miss a class, a summary of the material scheduled for that day will be posted on Brightspace shortly (usually within 24 hours). However, it must be emphasized that these are just summaries, not detailed class-notes. They do little more than list the key themes covered in the lecture on a given day, and refer to the passages explicitly covered in class.

CLASSROOM CONDUCT:

(a) The University of Victoria is committed to promoting critical academic discourse while providing a respectful and supportive learning environment. All members of the university community have the right to this experience, and the responsibility to help create, such an environment. The University will not tolerate racism, sexualized violence, or any form of discrimination, bullying or harassment.

Please be advised that by logging into UVic's learning systems and interacting with online resources, and by attending class, you are engaging in a university activity.

All interactions within this environment are subject to the university expectations and policies. Any concerns about student conduct, may be reviewed and responded to in accordance with the appropriate university policy.

To report concerns about online student conduct: onlineconduct@uvic.ca

(b) Coming late to class: The classroom is a work environment, and when students arrive late this can be a distraction. So please try to be on time.

(c) Visits to the classroom by non-registered students: As the instructor for this class I am duty-bound to ensure that a work environment is preserved in the class. Both students and I can find it a distraction for strangers to walk into the classroom. It takes some students a good deal of time before they gain confidence to participate in the class proceedings, and the presence of a stranger can be disruptive in that regard. If, as sometimes happens, you wish to invite a friend to attend my class to check it out, please ask permission ahead of time.

(d) Use of computers in the class: For the purpose of taking notes, you are welcome to use laptops with quiet keyboards in the classroom. Watching films and other distracting uses of computers are prohibited.

EMAILING ME:

Because of problems with SPAM and viruses transmitted by email, I request that whenever you email me you make sure to put something in the subject line of your email that identifies you as a student in this course. If you don't do this, and I don't recognize your name, I will delete your email without opening it. In addition to this, I would greatly appreciate it if you observed the (still) standard courtesy of beginning your emails with a salutation, e.g., "Dear Dr. Scott", "Hello Dr. Scott", etc. (as opposed to, e.g., "Hey Dave" or "Dude", which is too informal). Use of formal salutation is social etiquette rooted in the recognition that people are not simply inanimate objects (like ATM machines), but should be addressed before being spoken to. After all, unlike ATM machines, humans have the option to respond, so it's wise to ask them nicely.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY: Cheating of any kind, including collusion (working with others too closely) and plagiarism from (i) books and/or articles, (ii) other students' papers, and (iii) papers or other material on the internet, is a serious academic offence. University regulations also prohibit students from submitting the same work for two different courses; in other words, plagiarizing or “recycling” one’s own work is not permitted. If detected, cheating can result in dismissal from this course (with an “F”), and dismissal from the university. Here is a link to the University’s Academic Integrity policy:

SUBMITTING AND RETURNING GRADED WORK:

(a) All essays must be typed (12-font, Times), double-spaced, paginated, and contain the word-count on the front cover. I will not accept essays that exceed the maximum word limit.

(b) I will not be available to discuss test or essay questions on the day before or on the day they are due to be submitted, as I need to avoid being swamped by last-minute enquiries.

(c) When graded work is returned to you it will frequently be annotated with comments. If you wish to discuss your work with me, please read those comments first. To give you a chance to do this, as a matter of policy I do not discuss work on the same day as it is returned.

LATE ASSIGNMENTS / MISSED TESTS:

Late assignments will not be accepted without penalty, unless justified by a medical or other academically legitimate reason, for which documentation of some kind (e.g., a medical certificate) will generally be required. Late assignments will be accepted with a penalty of 5% per day (or part-day, including weekend days or part-days), for a maximum of 4 days (20%). After four days, no late assignments will be accepted.

OFFICE HOURS:

Office hours will be conducted live (by Zoom), and there will be a total of two office hours per week dedicated specifically to this course. Because of demand (especially near test days or essay due-dates), if you wish to see me during office hours you need to make an appointment well ahead of time. To get the most out of your appointment, it’s generally best to come prepared with specific questions. If for some reason you cannot meet me in my posted office-hour times, please contact me to arrange an alternative time, either in my office or on Zoom.

INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY OF MATERIAL ON LMS WEBSITE:

Intellectual property of materials on the LMS website: Please note that all assignments for this course and all materials posted to the LMS website are the intellectual property of myself and the University of Victoria. Do not circulate this material or post it to note-sharing sites without my permission. Posting course materials to note-sharing sites or otherwise circulating course materials without the permission of your instructor violates the Policy on Academic Integrity
