

LING 409: Advanced Morphological Analysis (1.5 units) Fall 2026 – University of Victoria

(3) Quechua vowel lengthening as μ -affixation

Trommer & Zimmermann (2014: 464), Generalized mora affixation and quantity-manipulating morphology.

Schedule

Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday: 9:30 - 10:20

Prerequisites

Complete all of the following

- Complete all of:
 - LING200 - Introduction to Phonetics and Phonology (1.5)
 - LING203 - Introduction to Morphology and Syntax (1.5)
- Complete 1 of:
 - LING311 - Syntax (1.5)
 - LING312 - Phonology (1.5)

Description

This course surveys issues in morphological theory with particular emphasis on contemporary theories and cross-linguistic analysis. We will explore how different theories account for non-concatenative morphology, such as lengthening, segmental changes and reduplication and what this implies for the architecture of the grammar.

Textbooks

- Various readings, handouts and slides will be distributed throughout the course.

Instructor

Suzanne Urbanczyk | Pronouns: she/her | urbansu@uvic.ca

Office hours: Wednesdays from 11:00 until 12:00