Description

The Concentration in Environmental Law and Sustainability (CELS) provides students with the opportunity to take more courses in environmental law and sustainability, and to use their legal knowledge in the direct service of real clients pursuing a range of interests aimed at environmental protection.

Students who complete the eight required courses and electives will be recognized as having spent a significant portion of their law program immersing themselves in environmental law and sustainability by providing a notation on their transcripts to that effect.

Admission Requirements and Procedures

The CELS is open to all UVic JD and JD/JID students with an average of 65% or better in their previous year of legal studies. This includes students who have transferred from other Canadian law schools who completed first year law at a different institution. BCL/JD students are ineligible for the CELS due to the course and unit requirements they must meet under the terms of that degree program.

Interested students can apply for admission to the CELS by submitting the attached application form to the law school’s front office in the Fraser Building. The Associate Dean will review applications to determine whether students qualify for the CELS.

Concentration Requirements

Students accepted into the concentration must fulfill the requirements of the CELS and the JD or JD/JID Program. That is, they must register in at least 14.5 units in each of their second, third (and fourth if JD/JID) years of law, they must achieve standing in each year and they must complete all compulsory courses and fulfil the major paper requirement.

Students must obtain a grade of 65% or higher in the eight required courses and electives that qualify towards the CELS.

Students who successfully complete the CELS and the JD or JD/JID will receive a notation on their transcript. Students are responsible for ensuring they meet the requirements.
NB. Regular guidelines around course registration priorities apply. Students in the CELS will not be given priority to specific courses. The 2020-21 Course Offering Patterns posted on the law registration webpage may assist with course planning for the CELS.

Required Courses

Students must complete all of these four courses with a grade of 65% or higher in each.
- LAW 301 The Administrative Law Process (usually offered every term)
- LAW 309 The Law of Evidence (usually offered every term)
- LAW 329 Environmental Law (usually offered in fall term)
- LAW 353 Environmental Law Clinic (usually offered in fall and spring and occasionally in summer)

Elective Courses

Students must complete at least 4 courses from the following list, with a grade of 65% or higher in each:
- LAW 328 Green Legal Theory (cross-listed with ES 419)
- LAW 331 International Ocean Law
- LAW 340 Indigenous Lands, Rights and Governance

- LAW 393 Contaminated Sites and Environmental Remediation
- LAW 394 Environmental Law and Science
- Other approved electives as noted in the attached appendix on page 4
- Other elective courses approved in writing by the Associate Dean, Academic and Student Relations, in advance of students enrolling in the course

Other Courses

New courses in environmental law and sustainability may be developed as permitted by available resources. See the appendix on page 4, of a list of additional approved electives.
The Faculty of Law academic regulation governing credit for courses outside the Faculty applies to the Concentration in Environmental Law and Sustainability. Students must obtain the permission of the Associate Dean, Academic and Student Relations to have the course count as an elective towards the CELS and JD or JD/JID before enrolling in the course.

Application Deadline

Students should submit the application form to the law school’s front office by no later than the formal deadline to apply to graduate. The deadlines are December 15 for spring graduation or July 15 for fall graduation. Students must also apply to graduate through the standard University process. Earlier submission of the CELS application to the front office may result in the notation being added to the academic transcript at an earlier date.
