

Canadian Institute for Historic Microreproduction (CIHM) / Early Canadiana Online (ECO)

The Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions was established by the National Library of Canada to locate and preserve early printed Canadian materials. It provides access to these publications on microfiche and online.

This collection includes works printed or published in Canada, about Canada, or written by Canadians from as early as the 17th century and as recent as the 1920s. The collection includes such sub-sets as Canadian Women's History, Colonial Government Journals, Early Official Publications, History of French Canada, Hudson's Bay, Jesuit Relations, and Native Studies, and many more topics covered on all aspects of early Canadian history. This is an invaluable source for primary and secondary materials relating to Canadian history, in both English and French.

Approximately 110 000 titles are available on Microfiche, and approximately 9 100 of those can be accessed online.

You can use Boolean operators for index searches to further specify your search

- Matches on any word (Boolean “or”) - If you select this option the search engine will retrieve all documents from the database that contain any of queried terms. For example, if you type in "Canada" and "constitution", then select 'Matches on any word,' you will be presented with a list of all documents that contain either the word "Canada" or the word "constitution."
- Matches on all words (Boolean “and”) - If this option is selected, the search engine looks for occurrences of queried terms on same pages throughout the collection. For example, by using the same words from above example, "Canada" and "constitution" and selecting 'Matches on all words,' you will get a list of documents with matching pages that contain both words: "Canada" and "constitution." This is the default setting.
- An exact phrase match - This is the most effective way to narrow your search. The search engine will retrieve only pages that exactly match your input.
