JOB POSTING

JOB TITLE: LAW7 – Legal Research Assistant
Engaging with the Economic Imaginary
Pedagogical Blogging

DEPARTMENT NAME: Faculty of Law

CONTACT NAME: Rebecca Johnson

JOB DESCRIPTION:

Research assistance on two projects: One will be drawing together materials on economic ordering (with attention to insights, practices, and questions coming from Indigenous theorizing, critical feminist theory, critical race theory, and posthuman theory and more); the other project involves the design and updating of two social media blog spaces focused on legal pedagogies and law-culture-humanities

QUALIFICATIONS:

Good organizational skills, as well as skill in both legal and 'extra-legal' research. Preference given to a student who has taken Law 315: Business Associations (or who has prior business-related experience, or business-related courses in other disciplines). It is not crucial that a person is deeply grounded in any particular approach to theory, but it will be helpful if the person is curious about the ways that questions of both theory and practice are crucial to the shape of our economic lives. Familiarity with Wordpress (or other blog platforms), and an interest in audiovisual resources would be an asset for the second part of the project.
