

University of Victoria

Notions of Justice Among Activists Opposed to the Trans Mountain Pipeline

Lauren Strumos

Thursday, March 31

5:00-6:00 p.m.

this event is online only

Zoom: <https://uvic.zoom.us/j/96971529046>

The Trans Mountain Expansion Project has called national attention to issues of fossil fuel extraction and Indigenous rights to land during the climate and ecological crises. Drawing on interviews conducted with non-Indigenous land and water defenders, I will explore the ways religious and nonreligious individuals conceptualize their opposition to the Project, as shaped by their subjective worldviews and cosmologies. In so doing I will utilize theories of environmental and ecological justice and demonstrate their applicability in the context of Canadian society.

Lauren Strumos is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Classics and Religious Studies at the University of Ottawa. Her research explores religious and nonreligious environmental activism, as well as human-nonhuman animal relations.

<https://www.uvic.ca/research/centres/csrs/>