

SCHOLARS IN THE SQUARE

How Nonreligion Changes End of Life Care

Religion can no longer be assumed to be the only meaningful framework for understanding the end of life. In this talk we draw from the Nonreligion in a Complex Future Project's research to map changes in death and dying related to obituaries, understandings of the afterlife, and approaches to palliative care. We understand these changes to be linked to the increased number of people who identify as nonreligious.

Lori Beaman is the Canada Research Chair in Religious Diversity and Social Change, Professor in the Department of Classics and Religious Studies at the University of Ottawa, and Director of the Nonreligion in a Complex Future (NCF) project.

Douglas Ezzy is Professor of Sociology at the University of Tasmania and co-investigator on the Nonreligion in a Complex Future project.

March 13, 2025

CLE B017, 5:00–6:15pm PT

JOIN US ONLINE

uvic.ca/csrs/events

Lori Beaman

Douglas Ezzy