Message from the Director

This report on the Centre for Global Studies (CFGS) at the University of Victoria covers a period of transition and renewal (2013 and 2014). This transition was far-reaching and involved a radical redesign of the Centre's organizational structure and portfolio of initiatives. This report provides an account of how we at CFGS have built upon the strong foundations established by our former director, Dr. Gordon Smith, and developed new and enhanced relationships and networks to bring the Centre more closely into line with the university's goals of a relevant, multidisciplinary, international and engaged institution. We have been able to welcome new multi-year projects to CFGS and to launch a fellowship program that is now in its second year. From a personal standpoint, I would like to emphasize what a privilege it has been to provide leadership for CFGS first as its interim director (August 2012 to June 2013) and since July 2013 as its regular director for a five-year term. One of the most rewarding experiences during this time has been to realize the potential of an interdisciplinary research centre such as CFGS. This has been particularly evident in our collaborations with the academic community at the University of Victoria. While research is often conducted in collaborative ways, the university as an institution does not provide many places for exchange, networking and collaboration across traditional disciplinary lines. CFGS allows for tapping into the talent and expertise of faculty and students and provides them with opportunities for enhancing the impact of their research that they otherwise simply would not be able to rely on. CFGS looks forward to welcoming you over the following years!

Oliver Schmidtke

About CFGS

Housed at the University of Victoria, the Centre for Global Studies was founded in 1998. Building on the University's existing base on interdisciplinary expertise CFGS is uniquely poised to bridge academic research, and student mentoring with knowledge mobilization and effective community engagement.

CFGS strives to produce quality and practical research with tangible benefits to both the local community and internationally.

CFGS has a rich history of producing cutting edge research and disseminating it in concise and accessible ways for both policy makers and the wider community.

CFGs PROJECTS

FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

The fellowship program is at the core of the networking initiatives of the Centre. CFGS launched its fellowship program in January 2013. Since then, 34 fellows from 5 continents and a variety of disciplines have been housed at CFGS. Fellows may consist of: UVic Graduate Students, UVic Faculty, Visiting Researchers or Faculty and International and Visiting Graduate Students. CFGS houses both stipendiary and non-stipendiary short-term fellows. Fellows typically spend two academic terms with CFGS, using the Centre as their primary office to conduct research and perform academic writing. Fellows are committed to actively participate in the Centre's programs and activities and to give at least one public seminar or lecture on the theme of the awarded fellow's research. This creates a unique, inclusive interdisciplinary community of researchers, staff and students at the Centre, conducive to a supportive academic work environment. In addition to the awarded fellowships, CFGS is also affiliated with several Associate Fellows. Associate Fellows play an important role at CFGS by participating in meetings and events and collaborating on projects. Many of the Centre's Associate Fellows were previously involved with the Centre as project leads, and are now engaged as advisors and/or mentors.

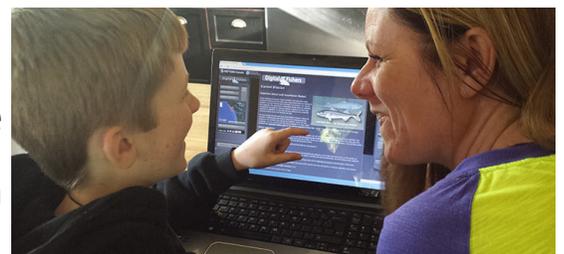

Canada, the US, Europe, Asia and the Middle East. During the time frame of this report, BIG co-hosted an inaugural conference with over 150 scholars from around the world at Carleton University, established the BC roundtable, and hired masters and PhD students to be doing research work.

BORDERS PROJECT

CFGS welcomed the Borders in Globalization (BIG) project during the summer of 2013. BIG is a seven-year international research collaboration led by Dr. Emmanuel Brunet-Jailly. The project explores the understanding of borders—real, remote and virtual—in the 21st century. BIG creates a partnership involving 23 universities and 34 non-academic partners from

DIGITAL FISHERS

Digital Fishers focuses on the application of science-oriented crowdsourcing or Web2.0—enabled citizen-science to the challenge of effectively assessing and annotating the large volume of visual and audio data streaming in from the NEPTUNE seafloor observatories data which is still largely undecipherable by current machine computation methods —without applying highly-skilled, scientifically-trained human resources in repetitive tasks that require very little training. The objective of this component is the creation of a crowdsourcing platform that engages large numbers of volunteers to provide a feedback loop from the database through the collective mind of the crowd and back to the database. An achievement over this report period was the partnership with the David Suzuki Foundation for the Sablefish Campaign and the contributions of almost 3000 users.

POLIS PROJECT

The POLIS Project on Ecological Governance is a centre for transdisciplinary research that investigates and promotes sustainability. POLIS fills a unique niche on campus as a place where academic and policy research meet community action. To foster healthy and sustainable communities, the POLIS Project collaborates with a diverse group of people and sectors, including urban and rural communities, all levels of government, including First Nations, Aboriginal organizations, businesses, co-operatives, public officials and the non-profit sector. During this review period, a major achievement for POLIS was the publishing of the research report, “A Blueprint for Watershed Governance in British Columbia.” It focuses on current water governance issues in B.C. and offers a path forward for how the Province could transform its current approaches to decision-making to ensure a more sustainable and resilient future—especially given B.C.’s new Water Sustainability Act. The report received attention in a dozen media outlets, including the Victoria Times Colonist, Water Canada magazine, The Tyee, and The Province. It also spurred a series of webinars targeted at the Canadian freshwater community, focusing on the nine winning conditions of watershed governance laid out in the report.

WIGG LAB

The WIGG Lab is made up of Honours undergraduate, Masters, and PhD students, as well as Postdoctoral Fellows. The goal of the WIGG Lab is to advance interdisciplinary research in the areas of water, social innovation, and global governance—and apply that research in local and international contexts. Each of the projects undertaken by the WIGG Lab targets different components of the processes that may contribute to transformative change in water governance. The research relies heavily, although not exclusively, on complex systems thinking, resilience, social structuration theory, social transitions theory, and design thinking, while drawing on different disciplinary approaches to understanding change. A major success over this report period is WIGG has nearly completed the Water Governance and Hydraulic Fracturing project, partnered with POLIS, Fort Nelson First Nation, and the Confederacy of Mainland Mi’kmaq, which explores the governance challenges and opportunities surrounding water allocation for hydraulic fracturing. The final project report will be available in early 2015.

EUROPEAN UNION CENTRE OF EXCELLENCE

The European Union selected the University of Victoria as a European Union Centre of Excellence for the second time; UVic previously co-hosted from 2009–2012 with the University of Toronto’s Munk Centre. The EUCE is housed at CFGS and coordinates lectures, conferences, workshops, summers schools, online courses, and student travel and research grants. The EUCE adds value to CFGS through its interdisciplinary program that connects faculty from more than 10 departments giving CFGS greater visibility on campus and with students. EUCE provided over 20 grants to students, hosted several conferences, including one on CETA, a summer conference for graduate students, and currently running a free online course, EU Borders without Walls, with 75 students from all over the world. As a hub for European Union focused activities on campus, students, faculty, staff and the broader community will benefit from the institutional support CFGS provides for the EUCE.

All CFGS Fellows actively take part in and present in the Global Talks series; a weekly discussion which provides an opportunity for researchers within the CFGS to share their research in an informal, collegial and supportive environment. Based on these regular meetings, the Centre has built a growing community of researchers on campus and around the globe from a variety of disciplines.

EVENTS

CFGS has hosted over 170 events during this reporting period. Events include, conferences, co-sponsored events, weekly in house global talks, and guest lecturers. Below we have highlighted several. For a complete listing view the online events calendar.

CO-SPONSORED EVENTS

CFGS regularly works with other UVic departments and external organizations to co-sponsor events on various global issues. Over the period of this report, CFGS has contributed to over 30 co-hosted events. A highlight of our co-sponsored events includes CFGS' 2014 contribution to Ideafest. CFGS co-hosted four different events from March 3-6 with a range of partners including UVic departments and centres as well as external organizations and initiatives. The largest event was, "Tapped In: How do we engage youth in the world's greatest challenges?". Partnering with Claremont Secondary School's Institute for Global Solutions, this event was an opportunity to work with local educators who are focusing on pressing global issues in their classrooms. This event brought over 200 high school students to campus to discuss how to engage our youth in the world's biggest challenges - the event featured an afternoon of musical performances, as well as presentations by author Gwynne Dyer and Moussa Magassa from UVic's Equity and Human Rights office, and a market place promoting university academic programs and clubs getting prospective students enthusiastic about what UVic has to offer.

GORDON SMITH LECTURE SERIES

On June 2, 2014 CFGS hosted the inaugural Gordon Smith Lecture Series, created in recognition of Dr. Gordon Smith's service to the university community for 13 years as the Director of the Centre for Global Studies. In lieu of admission, donations were requested by attendees to be put towards the continuation of the Gordon Smith Lecture Series. The inaugural event featured Dr. Gordon Smith and the Right Honourable Paul Martin. The lecture was entitled "Short-termism and Democracy: Can short-sighted democracies address long-term global issues?" and consisted of former Prime Minister Paul Martin and former Deputy Minister Gordon Smith leading a discussion on looking to the future to inform how global issues can be managed. The inaugural event had a fantastic turnout of over 150 attendees who took part in an engaging discussion. We intend to continue to host this lecture series annually or biennially and look forward to welcoming many additional esteemed lecturers.

GUEST LECTURES

CFGS is proud to have hosted and to continue to host a number of events featuring guest lecturers addressing key global issues with a view to social and political change. It is in this context that CFGS regularly seeks to involve different communities and stakeholders as actively as possible. Guest lecturers range from UVic faculty outside of the Centre to distinguished scholars and political figures from all over the world. Many of the events featuring guest lecturers are hosted by CFGS in collaboration with other UVic departments, centres and organizations. Some highlighted distinguished guest lecturers include: Mustapha Kamal Pasha (Sixth Century Professor of International Relations at the University of Aberdeen in Scotland and Vice-President of the International Studies Association), Mukesh Kapila (Professor of Global Health and Humanitarian Affairs at the University of Manchester), and Hamadi Jebali (former Prime Minister of Tunisia). A full list of our lecturers can be found on our website.

CONFERENCES

CFGS has hosted multiple conferences - one to highlight was the POLIS Project on Ecological Governance's "Watersheds 2014: Towards watershed governance in BC and beyond, three-day forum". This event took place over January 27-29, 2014 at the Cowichan Tribes territory in Duncan, BC. Almost 200 delegates took part in this event with over 75 additional virtual participants across the country. This event spoke to the interdisciplinary nature of what we do at CFGS, bringing together participants from all background and positions including watershed groups, researchers, professional resource managers, and decision-makers at all levels of government, including First Nations. The conference was co-sponsored in partnership between CFGS, Cowichan Tribes and numerous other local and national partners.

| Balance       | $45,740.46 | $20,181.93 |

1. This surplus was largely because of the launch of the CFGS fellowship program- funds were earmarked to cover fellows for the academic year but the program did not commence until January 2013; thus most of the expense associated with this first fellowship intake fell in the 2013-2014 fiscal year.

2. See footnote 1. This deficit is due to extraneous fellowship payments falling within this fiscal year. The overall account balance remained positive as seen in the cash flow table.
