Job Description

The Behavioural Medicine Laboratory, part of the School of Exercise Science, Physical and Health Education, is currently conducting several intervention trials exploring parental and family-based physical activity.

We are seeking enthusiastic, outgoing individuals to help with fitness testing for our current trials.

For this position, you will be collaborating with the research teams, but most importantly you will be engaging with the parents and children who come in for fitness testing.

Qualifications

- CPT or CEP designation
- Energetic, outgoing, and effective independent worker who thrives in a collaborative environment
- Excellent interpersonal skills and strong communication and development of relationships
- Experience working with children and parents is an asset
- Able to respond to scheduling requests promptly
- Can work evenings and weekends

Open to All Majors: Kinesiology; Exercise Science, Physical and Health Education
