Field Courses

Field Course: Primates and Predators

December 28th 2016 - January 10th 2017

Deadline: November 18th, 2016

- This is a course in tropical biology with a focus on primate and carnivore interactions, conservation, and research in the hyper diverse Western Ghats of India.
- Hands-on learning takes place during the day through guided wildlife research activities, which are supplemented with brief lectures and discussions of scientific literature in the evenings. Participants will also receive introductory training in herpetology, ornithology, entomology, and botany. Skills they will gain include scat and hair snare monitoring, tree climbing, radio telemetry, camera trapping, plant identification, primate tracking, and behavioral sampling techniques. Participants additionally experience Indian culture through travel, zoo, national park, and bird sanctuary visits, and of course, taste the many flavors of Indian cuisine throughout the course.
- Scholarships also available. For more information please read here.

Field Course: Methods in Primate Behaviour and Conservation

Dates: Winter Session: January 1 – 16, 2017

Summer Session: July 15 – July 30, 2017

Program Fee: $2600

Application deadline: Winter Session: December 1, 2016 Summer Session: June 1, 2017

Location: Osa Conservation, Osa Peninsula, Costa Rica

- This course is designed to provide students with field experience in primate behavior, ecology, and conservation. This course will be held at Osa Conservation's Piro Research Station in Costa Rica's spectacular Osa peninsula. As the one of the largest tracts of rain forest north of the Amazon (roughly 400,000 acres in the Osa Conservation Area), it is renowned for high species diversity. It is one of only a few places in Costa Rica that has jaguar, puma, sea turtles and four species of monkey (mantled howler monkey, black-handed spider monkey, white-faced capuchin and squirrel monkey).
- For more information please read here.
