

Fall 2021 Environmental Studies Research Colloquium

Wednesdays
11:30 a.m. – 12:30 p.m.
Hybrid Format

Please contact gschepens@uvic.ca for Zoom login credentials

Date	Speaker	Topic or title
15 Sept	Faculty five minute talks	Sarah, Eric, Trevor, Darcy, Nancy, Kara, John, Ban Marine Ethnoecology Lab grad students
22 Sept	Peter Ross	Healthy waters: a community-oriented pollution initiative for British Columbia
29 Sept	Beatrice Frank	Why collecting longitudinal social science evidence matters for protected areas management and governance: A CRD Regional Park Case Study
6 Oct	Heather Castleden	Decolonizing sustainable energy policy in Canada
13 Oct	Christina Hoicka	What role do regions and rural communities play in city renewable energy transitions?
20 Oct	Gerald Singh	Reconsidering Risk in a Changing Ocean: Preparing for and Responding to Disasters for Sustainable Marine Development
27 Oct	Briony Penn	Survey Markers: Sharper than Knives. Decolonizing historic survey plans for reconciliation and restoration.
3 Nov	Marco Hatch	Using Indigenous resource management to span the boundary between Indigenous communities and academic research.
10 Nov	NO SEMINAR	READING BREAK
17 Nov	Linda Steg	Psychology and climate change: How to promote climate action.

You are invited to attend our weekly Research Colloquium. This year, we are hosting the seminar online via Zoom, and with limited in-person capacity in DTB B-255. Speakers will be a mix of in-person and on Zoom. Please contact Gabe Schepens (gschepens@uvic.ca) for the login credentials. This login information will provide access for the entire semester.

Graduate student hosts will begin with a land acknowledgement and introduce the speaker. After a 35-40 minute talk, question period will begin with the in-person graduate student audience. If time permits, we will open questions up to the online audience more broadly. You can type your questions in the chat and a moderator will call upon you when it is your turn.

Due to the dynamic nature of public health advisories, we are prepared to carry out our seminar series fully online if necessary, and will update guests accordingly.