

Challenges of Global Development

Our biggest challenge in this new century is to take an idea that seems abstract - sustainable development - and turn it into a reality for all the world's people.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

As a result of climate change, projected population growth, and rising demand for food, energy and water, the world faces some extraordinary challenges in the next decade. These are not isolated problems confined to one country or region. They are shared challenges that cross borders. My intention in offering this course is to provide an overview of some of these challenges, and to provide students with the opportunity to explore pathways to their resolution.

This course seeks to:

1. promote critical thinking with respect to debates, conflicts, and policy issues surrounding natural resource use, poverty alleviation and equitable development.
 2. enhance analytical and communication skills through written exercises and class discussions.
 3. provide a catalyst for future reflection and action.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

By the end of this course students will:

- Have a better appreciation of the interlinkages between the strategic resources of food, water, and energy and how they impact on poverty from a global perspective.

- Be able provide an argument (and marshal evidence to support it) in written work on possible pathways to the resolution of selected development challenges.
