Violence and Neoliberalism, and Anarchism, Oh My!
A critical geographical research agenda

Simon Springer
Associate Professor, Department of Geography
University of Victoria

This talk highlights the trajectory I have taken towards embracing a critical geographical perspective in my scholarly pursuits. In outlining my research program, I hope to remove some of the mystery and confusion surrounding the practice of critical geographies. In particular I will outline how violence and neoliberalism have formed the basis of my research agenda, and how and why such a focus developed into a radical revitalization of anarchist geographies.