Dates: July 3 – August 19
CRN: 31216
Schedule: MW 13:30-16:00
In this course we will be working on the basic premises and concepts of social contract theory including the social contract, the state of nature, natural law, the state, sovereignty, and private property in the works of Thomas Hobbes, John Locke, and J.J. Rousseau. We will also engage with contemporary critical responses to social contract theories from the standpoint of feminist and critical race theories.

POLI 319: POLITICS OF TRUTH AND RECONCILIATION (ISSUES IN POLITICS)
Instructor: Janice Dowson
Dates: July 3 – August 19
CRN: 31217
Schedule: TR 13:30-16:00
How do truth commissions address instances and legacies of gross human rights violations, mass atrocity, civil war and genocide? What is the interplay of truth, justice, and reconciliation in states grappling with the aftermath of conflict? This course will explore these questions by looking at the political, social and legal challenges that states face when they use truth commissions to address histories of injustice. It will do so by examining several case studies including: Argentina, South Africa, Rwanda, and Canada.

POLI 335  GENDER AND POLITICS
Instructor: Dr. Grace Lore
Dates: July 4 – August 19
CRN: 31218
Schedule: MW 9:30-12:00
This course examines how gender, or the social construction of femininity and masculinity, has affected governance in different parts of the world. Following an examination of key theoretical perspectives on gender and governance, we will survey how gender affects participation in state structures and civil society groups as well as policy outcomes in established and new democracies. Lastly we will focus on gender and governance as they pertain to international governmental and non-governmental organizations.

POLI 349  CLIMATE CHANGE AND MIGRATION (ISSUES IN INTERNATIONAL POLITICS)
Instructor: Nicole Bates-Eamer
Dates: May 13-June 28
CRN: 31159
Days: TR 9:30-12:00
Climate change and human mobility are two highly contentious topics. Bring them together and the challenge increases exponentially. This course will explore the complex relationship between climate change and migration with a particular emphasis on the politics of forced displacement and the responses at the international level. The course will include case studies from North and Central America, Asia, Africa and the Middle East.

POLI 350  INTRO TO PUBLIC ADMIN
Instructor: TBA
Dates: May 6 – August 2
CRN: 31956
ONLINE
This course explores the external factors affecting contemporary public sector management in Canada, the changing structural and value context within which public servants work, the key processes in which they are engaged and how those processes are changing. We will focus primarily on the federal and provincial governments, but references will also be made to public administration at other levels.
POLI 351  PUBLIC POLICY AND ANALYSIS
Instructor: Dr. Daniel Westlake
Dates: May 13-June 28
Days: MW 9:30-12:00
How do governments know what policies best solve different public policy problems? This course looks at a systematic approach to policy analysis that goes from problem identification, to selecting and recommending policy options, to evaluating their success or failure.

POLI 369  POLITICAL PARTIES IN CANADA
Instructor: Dr. Daniel Westlake
Dates: May 13 – June 28
Schedule: MW 13:30-16:00
Political parties play an essential role in Canadian democracy shaping election results and MPs’ behaviour in the legislature. This course explores the development of the Canadian party system and the way that Canadian political parties work.

POLI 382  POLITICS AND RELIGION
Instructor: Dr. Andrew Wender
Dates: May 13 – June 28
Schedule: TR 13:30-16:00
This course seeks to reflect critically on what is signified by, and at stake in the peculiar, modern conceptualizing of ‘politics’ and ‘religion’ as distinct entities, each consigned to its own rightful domain of existence. Material and discussions will integrate examples drawn from various historical configurations of political community, eg. present-day nation-stats like Iran, Israel and the United States; international as well as transnational bodies such as the UN, Europe and the Islamic Community; and more localized or regionalized, sub-national settings, from the American South to Quebec.

POLI 433  POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY (Seminar)
Instructor: Dr. Joseph Fletcher
Dates: May 13 – June 28
Schedule: MW 9:30-12:00
Students will investigate fast and slow processes in political thinking. The focus will be on implicit versus explicit attitudes toward indigenous, immigrant and homeless populations.
