

I am Associate Professor in the History department, and director of the department's Honours program. My research area is 18th-century and revolutionary France, and I teach courses inspired by my current projects – such as the History of Money and a seminar in using criminal trial documents as sources – as well as broader offerings in European history. I have served my department as Undergraduate Coordinator and I run a number of outward-facing initiatives, including an international exchange with the University of Toulouse, in France, and a public lecture series, Café historique, which takes place at Hermann's downtown. I am currently serving on Senate in a 1-year replacement position, and I would love to be able to continue my work there, including on the Senate Committee on Appeals, for a regular term. I am passionate about academic standards, student outcomes, fair treatment for everyone on campus, and consultative and collegial governance. If I am elected, I look forward to bringing the voices of my colleagues in the Faculty of Humanities to Senate – please feel free to email me about issues that matter to you.
