

Vivien Corwin - Biographical Sketch/Statement of Candidacy

I joined the Gustavson School of Business in 2006, and now serve as Academic Director of the Master of Management Program. As Associate Teaching Professor at the Gustavson School of Business, I work with students at all levels - graduate, post-graduate and undergraduate. My topics of interest include collaboration, employee engagement, leadership, and change management. My research has been published in Harvard Business Review, Journal of Organizational Behavior, and The American Behavioral Scientist. I also work as a facilitator and advisor for a number of corporate clients, and work closely with GSB Executive Education to design short courses and leadership development programs for a range of different organizations. I enjoy facilitation as it gives me an opportunity to engage a variety of audiences, encourage diverse perspectives, and help to articulate common and engaging goals.

Having served on the Dean Search Committee last year, I am keen to serve again. I felt that we had a highly effective group of faculty and staff representatives on the committee, representing a good range of different stakeholder groups and interests across the School. As a member of the teaching stream, I have a particular interest in making sure that programs and teaching are well represented as we look for a new Dean, and also in bringing to the committee my expertise and past experience around hiring for values and for fit.
