

Juliet Watts is a third-year student at UVic, majoring in Political Science with a minor in Public Administration. Juliet was raised in Kelowna and moved to Victoria in 2017 to study Environmental Studies at UVic. After discovering that many of the environmental problems she was learning about had solutions that necessitated political action, she transferred into Political Science and Public Administration.

Since coming to UVic she has had representative leadership experience as the UVSS Director of Campaigns and Community Relations, and as a Director-at-Large for the Undergraduates of Political Science Course Union. She has extensive experience in representing and advocating for students to the university, and navigating various bureaucratic systems at all levels of government.

As her role at the UVSS comes to an end and she prepares to fill the role of Undergraduate representative on UVic's Board of Governors, Juliet is ready to move on from submitting formal correspondence to directly engaging with critical issues as a voting member on both the Board of Governors and Senate. Juliet is one of the lead organizers of Divest UVic, she has been dissatisfied by the extensive delays and lack of action taken by UVic on environmental issues.

If elected, she will:

- Advocate for full divestment from fossil fuel extraction, refinement and transportation companies
- Establish a collaborative relationship with UVSS Board and UVic Board of Governors to ensure the best possible representation and efficient advocacy for Undergraduates
- Increase consultation and transparency with the student body by being accessible to students and raising awareness about the UVic Senate
