Dr. Devi Mucina is an associate Professor and the Director of the Indigenous Governance Program at the University of Victoria. His scholarship on Black Indigenous masculinities, researches how Gule Wamukulu (performative spiritual mask dancing) and Ngoni Ngoma function as tools of reviving Black Indigenous governance in the service of communal health and wellness. His other research explores the impact of parental and familial members’ incarceration on their children and questions the risk factors this creates for their future incarceration from an Indigenous intersectional theoretical framework. He received the 2019 Faculty of Human and Social Development Teaching and Educational Leadership Award and has published 2 referred monograph books & 2 Edited Books, 6 referred chapters, 13 articles in referred journals and 2 documentary films. Devi is also the author of the new book, Ubuntu Relational Love: Decolonizing Black Masculinities https://uofmpress.ca/books/detail/ubuntu-relational-love